

MIGHTY POWER

Vested In President of United States to Make or Unmake National Laws.

"All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills."

"Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by two-thirds of that House it shall become a law. But in all cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively."—[From Article I, Section VII, of the Constitution of the United States.]

This is the mightiest power which a free people ever voluntarily conferred upon a Chief Executive. The King of Great Britain must sign whatever measure Parliament enacts. The royal veto no longer exists. Even though it be his own death warrant, the King must sign. But the President of the United States may give or withhold his consent, as the public welfare, in his opinion, requires.

He has no power to say what shall be the law, but he has power to say what shall not be the law, unless two-thirds of each House of Congress override his objections.

The evidence before the coroner's jury was that Hedges came in from work and found Wyatt locked in a room with his wife, and breaking down the door, shot Wyatt down as he was lying on the floor, his heart being torn out by the shot.

The woman testified that Wyatt assaulted her. Hedges had told Wyatt to stay away from his home.

A NEW RELIGION

Is Promised, Which Will Not be Bound by Any Dogma or Creed.

Cambridge, Mass., July 22.—Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, in an address before the Harvard Summer School of Theology, today prophesied the advent of a new religion.

"It will not be bound by dogma or creed," he said. "Its workings will be simple, but its field of action limitless. Its discipline will be the training in the development of co-operative good-will. It will attack all forms of evil. There will be no supernatural element; it will place no reliance on anything but the laws of nature. Prevention will be the watchword and a skilled surgeon one of its members."

"It will not deal chiefly with sorrow and death, but with joy and life. 'God will be so imminent that no intermediary will be needed. Its priests will strive to improve social and industrial conditions. The new religion will not attempt to reconcile people to present ills, but the promise of future compensation.'"

Night Rider Raid Again.

Brownsville, Ky., July 24.—Mrs. William Farris, of the "Farris Settlement," in this county, near Bee Spring, was in town this morning and reports that a band of twenty-five or thirty night riders took her husband, William Farris, his brother, James Farris, and his brother-in-law, Sol Gross, from their homes last night and whipped them.

The "riders" put in their appearance about midnight and took each man from his home separately and carried them a short distance to a grove, tied them to trees and whipped them severely. None of the persons engaged in the whipping are known. This is the first work of this kind that has taken place in Edmonson county during the frequent night rider troubles in near-by counties, and so far as is known there is no organized band in this county.

The wife of William Farris, who brought the news, says that her husband knew the band was coming and had prepared for them, but they broke the door down and had hold of him before he had time to defend himself.

All visitors or delegates coming by rail will please send their names to Mr. Hugh Milby, Magnolia, Ky. All congregations in the Presbytery and all Missionary societies are urged to be represented. Representatives from churches will please bring church records. Let us have a good attendance and come praying for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit all over Leitchfield Presbytery.

MRS. J. C. SLATON, S. C.

This Applies to Our County, Too.

The Elizabethtown News says: The next year the United States Government takes the census. Among things the census taker is required to find out is how many illiterate white children of school age there are. The school teachers of Hardin county have a year the start of the census-taker. If they will, there ought not to be a single white child in Hardin county of school age who cannot read and write. Will they? Will they work to get all the illiterate children into the schools and teach them this year how to read and write? It can be done. What could be more creditable to Hardin county than to find in the government census for next year that white illiteracy among the children had been stamped out? What grander work for the teacher than this? We believe our teachers are impressed with the importance of their calling and their great opportunity. We would impress upon them that any illiterate child in the school district not brought into the school is a neglected opportunity on the part of the teacher to serve the child, the county and the State. Teachers, use your opportunities now.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick, of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at James H. Williams'.

Last Surviving Member Dead.

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 24.—Mrs. J. Addison Hayes died at her home here, after an illness of several months.

The decedent was the last surviving member of the immediate family of Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy.

Mrs. Hayes has one son, Jefferson, who, to perpetuate the name of her illustrious father, has become, by an act of the California Legislature, Jefferson Hayes Davis. Her daughter, Mrs. Naomi Howell Davis Hayes, also survives her.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy the Best and Safest.

"It affords me pleasure to state that I consider the preparation known as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy the best and surest of good results of any I have ever used in my family," says P. E. Herington, of Mount Aerial, Ky. This is the universal verdict of all who use this remedy. Its cures are so prompt and effectual that people take pleasure in recommending it. For sale by all dealers.

In Memoriam.

"The Lord doeth all things well," but it seems that we can never understand why that on July 7th, He came and took from us Otis Maddox, for it seems that we needed him, oh, so much. All that willing hearts and loving hands could do was done, but God needed him and saw fit to take him to that happy home not made with hands. He was sick five weeks, but he was never heard to murmur or complain. He bore his sufferings with much patience and when God called him, he said the way was clear and he was ready. 'Tis so hard to give him up, but sweet to know that some day we can all go to him where there is no death, no dark, gloomy days and no tears to shed.

"We miss thee from our home, dear,
We miss thee from thy place;
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face.
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care;
Our home is dark without thee—
We miss thee everywhere."

Lockjaw From Street Dust.

Columbus, O., July 24.—Now comes the rose thorn to be classed as deadly. Some days ago Catherine, the little daughter of W. E. McClain, of this city, stepped on such a thorn which made a tiny puncture under her smallest toe.

To-day tetanus manifested its presence and the little sufferer died at the Protestant Hospital to-night.

In a nearby cot is Claude Harris, a ten-year-old boy, who stepped upon a garden rake and ran a rusty prong into his great toe. He, too, has tetanus, and is in a dangerous state.

In both cases the physicians say the infection came from a germ that is developed in the intestines of the horse, and is found everywhere in the dust of the streets.

Shot to Death by Son He Chastised.

Somerset, Ky., July 24.—James Starns, County Surveyor, and one of the best-known citizens of Pulaski county, was shot to death at his home, near Woodstock, in the eastern part of the county, last night by his sixteen-year-old son.

The report from the scene says that Starns was correcting the son in the usual chastising manner, when he became enraged, seized a shotgun and emptied the contents into the body of his father, who expired immediately.

Starns was a candidate in the recent Republican primary election, and came within a few votes getting the nomination for Assessor.

Divided in Life United in Death.

Covington, Ky., July 24.—Incased in black cloth caskets side by side, the bodies of Everett Tully, wife-murderer and self-slayer, and his victim, were sent to Williamstown to-day for burial. Accompanying the bodies were the two heart-broken children of the couple and the sobbing mother of Tully.

At the Coroner's inquest it developed that Mrs. Tully had planned to get a divorce, and that on previous occasions her husband threatened to kill her.

Killed by Brother-in-Law.

Henderson, Ky., July 24.—Sam Crooks aged about 45 years, was shot in the heart and killed this afternoon between 1 and 2 o'clock by Fagin Culver at the home of the latter near Anthonston, this county. Crooks is said to have renewed a quarrel he had with Culver a few days ago. Crooks was a brother-in-law of the man that killed him and subrented to Culver. The latter lived on an adjoining farm. Crooks was a married man with two or three children. Culver surrendered later to the Sheriff.

To Hartford Herald Subscribers.

The U. S. Post-office Department rules all newspapers to require subscriptions PAID IN ADVANCE. The general price of one dollar per year for country weeklies was originally made in consideration of its being paid in advance. It costs more now to make a newspaper than it did when the price of one dollar was fixed. It is not profitable to the publisher to take subscriptions at that price if not paid in advance. So every consideration makes it urgent that you keep your subscription paid ahead.

Farmers' Convention.

Princeton, Ky., July 26.—The State convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America will convene here to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock. The welcome address will be delivered by Mayor M. J. Groom and the response by State President Robert Johnson. National President Barrett, of Georgia, will deliver an address at 11 o'clock. This will conclude the morning session and at 1:30 o'clock a secret session will be held continuing through the afternoon. At 8 o'clock there will be an address to the public and Wednesday and Thursday the program will consist of a business session.

Alarming Increase.

Statistics show that the mortality from Bright's disease and diabetes has more than doubled the past 10 years. Many of these cases were the result of neglecting early symptoms of kidney trouble that Foley's Kidney Remedy would have quickly cured. Take Foley's Kidney remedy for backache and irregularities. This great medicine strengthens the kidneys and bladder and you should take it at once and avoid a serious malady. Sold by J. H. Williams, Hartford.

Young Wife—Oh, Edward, you do believe that I am always thinking of economy, don't you? Young Husband—Mabel, your shilling telegram this afternoon telling me where to go to save sevenpence on a carpet broom warns me that you are thinking of it too much.—London Express.

BRIBERY IN RUSSIA.

An Incident of the Reign of the "Czar-Liberator."

An old and long retired Russian general, a man of the "old school," related the following story in illustration of the official bribery that prevails in Russia, the incident being one within his own personal knowledge:

During the reign of Alexander II, the "czar-liberator," the widow of a distinguished general endeavored to obtain an appointment in a certain ministry for her only son, a young man of superior education and intelligence. The minister promised the widow to reserve the first occurring vacancy in his department. She waited in vain for the fulfillment of the promise and twice repeated her appeal by letter. She learned, too, that in the meantime several vacancies had been filled by other candidates.

The widow then waited upon the emperor and told his majesty of the minister's broken promises and her own keen disappointment, and after a few moments' consideration the czar asked her if she had inclosed a gift of money to the minister with her written application.

"Why, certainly not, your majesty. I should not dare put such an affront upon his excellency."

"Do not trouble yourself about the affront, madame," replied the czar, "but renew your prostration to the minister and inclose £1,000 to him."

"But I have no such sum of money, your majesty," said the widow dolefully.

"Oh, as to that, I will lend you the money, and the minister will no doubt repay me, and you will inform me, please, of the result of your renewed application with the inclosure."

The widow sent her son to the minister with the £1,000 lent by the czar inclosed with a politely written note, the result being that the young man received the desired appointment the same day.

About a week later the minister had just concluded his customary official report to the czar when his majesty observed, "By the way, there is a very intelligent and promising young man, the son of the late General —, for whom you can perhaps find a fairly prospective position in your department."

"But, your majesty," said the minister, "that young man is already in my department, and I should say that he is likely to make a career for himself."

"Tell me, please," quietly asked the czar, "how much did this youth's mother pay you for the appointment?"

The minister was too wily and tactful outwardly to manifest his surprise and chagrin, and he knew, too, that his safety demanded a perfectly candid reply to his sovereign.

"Would your majesty be interested," he said, "to hear what I myself paid for the influence which procured my portfolio from your gracious hands? The total sum was £22,500, and, relatively speaking, I do not think, with all humility, that this lady has paid at all dearly for the prospects of her son."

The minister repaid to the czar the £1,000 and was not unkindly dismissed from the audience, and he also retained his portfolio.—Odessa Cor. London Standard.

The African Buffalo.

A wounded buffalo is vastly more dangerous when he runs away than when he charges, for in nine cases out of ten after a dash that may be for a few hundred yards or a mile he will reverently circle back to an interception of his own trail, stand hidden in grass or thicket until his pursuer comes plodding along the trail and then charge upon him. Despite the fierce temper of a lone bull, his savage cunning and his great, charging bulk, I believe him much less dangerous than the lion, for he has far less speed, lacks the lion's poisoned claws and is a much bigger target. This opinion is substantiated by the indisputable fact that at least ten men are killed or maimed by lion to one killed by buffalo.—Edgar Beecher Bronson in Century.

The Temple of Zeus.

All that remains of the great temple of Zeus, which was 700 years in building, is to be found about 150 yards from the foot of the Acropolis at Athens. The ruins consist of sixteen columns of the Corinthian order, six and one-half feet in diameter and sixty feet high. It was the second largest temple erected by the Greeks, one superior to it in size being the temple of Diana at Ephesus. According to a legend, its foundation was built by Dukkallon, the Greek Noah, who from this point witnessed the waters of the flood subside. An opening in the ground is said to be the orifice through which the flood disappeared.

Amended.

In a book of musical criticism the author alluded in flattering terms to the works of his friend Herr Q. Unfortunately during the printing of the volume the two friends quarreled. Then the offended author had inserted in each copy of the book a slip of paper with the following note: "Erratum, page 94, line 21, for 'Herr Q.', the eminent composer and distinguished musician,' read 'Herr Q.', the pretentious violinist and impudent and clumsy plagiarist!"—London Mail.

Testing Dear Little Fido's Milk.

"Aisy, dear," remarked a young wife to her husband, "I wish you would taste this milk and see if it is perfectly sweet. If it's the least bit sour I mustn't give any of it to dear little Fido!"—London Tit-Bits.

"A man's religion never dies so long as he uses the Golden Rule in measuring his actions."
